

BEWARE OF GREEKS BEARING BONDS ON WINNING STRATEGIES TALK SHOW MARCH 12, 2010 AT 9:00 A.M. ET.

Tim Connolly's Winning Strategies www.winningstrategies.net will discuss the recent sale of Greek bonds and the odd way they were marketed this week, on the CRN Digital Radio Network show. Senior Editor Tim Connolly commented, "Greece conducted a successful bond sale, but according to the Wall Street Journal, US investors, investment banks, and other funds largely stayed out of the bidding. Why? Just take a look at this quote from the Guardian.uk on the sale---" "Greece, which has said it will not succumb to "speculators", shut the door on banks and hedge funds in its latest bond sale, and dropped Goldman Sachs and other US investment banks as transaction managers."

"We targeted real money investors, like insurance companies, mutual funds, instead of banks and hedge funds – we directed the transaction away from them," Petros Christodoulou, the new head of Greece's debt management office, told the Guardian. "I felt that real money investors are more long-term players, whereas [the others] are more short-term."

Tim Connolly added, "It certainly sounds like Greece gamed the members of the investor community that is dumb enough to only play for yield on capital, instead of first focusing on return of capital! BEWARE OF GREEKS BEARING BONDS!" We will discuss this with prominent analysts and investors live on Winning Strategies tomorrow from 9:00-11:00 a.m. ET.
